TREMOURS

A tremour is a repetitive twitching of a muscle, it is different from shivering and from “nerves” and most owners can recognise these problems with their pet and know they are limited and what to do to them.

A true tremour is not controllable. It may be worse with excitement or stress. It may not happen all the time.

If tremour's start suddenly and affect your pet's whole body and keep going, then you need to get to your vet asap as your pet may have been poisoned. Poisons that can cause tremors are:

- Snail bait (metaldehyde)
- Insecticides (organophosphate)
- Rat bait (bromethalin)
- Strychnine
- Organo chlorines pesticides (e.g. organochlorines and carbamates)
- And other chemicals e.g. cannabis, eucalyptus oil.
- Plants e.g. yesterday, today & tomorrow plant (Brunfelsia), rhododendrons
- Ventolin (salbutamol)
- There are some rare storage diseases

Many plants cause tremours including mushrooms and toadstools, so make sure you tell your vet if your pet has had access to any poisons in your yard or on walks. If your pet may have eaten yours or a family member's medicines or even over the counter medicines, please tell your vet. If the drugs are illegal (cannabis or cocaine) your vet still needs to know in order to save your pet. Don't think your vet will judge you, they are more concerned about your pet.

Your vet will need to do a blood test to check for metabolic causes of tremours including hypoglycaemia and hypocalcaemia, liver diseases and to rule out other problems. Many of these problems can be specifically treated.

Most tremours are due to problems in the brain such as neurotransmitter problems, denervation problem or clot of blood affecting blood supply to part of brain or inflammation of part of brain.

Your vet will do a neurological examination to work out what part of the brain is involved e.g. is it cerebellar or is it multifocal. If your pet has a problem in their brain it is not necessarily a death sentence. Many of these syndromes can be managed even if not cured so your pet can still have a great quality of life.

Idiopathic tremours of adult dogs:

Also called white dog shaker disease- although this mostly occurs in small white breeds, it can occur in any breed. Tremours worsen over about 3 days and then stabilise. Often there is weakness or swaying and sometimes a head tilt. They respond well to corticosteroids and diazepam. Usually in a few days they are back to normal. High dose, of meds for 2 weeks and then slowly reducing cortisone – but your pet may need a low dose for 6 months. This problem is believed to be an immune – medicated reaction to tyrosine – producing cells important in neurotransmitter production. The important thing is prognoses is good – it is responsive to treatment.

Steroid responsive meningitis / arteritis / vasculitis

This is a nasty inflammatory disease of the brain. It is mostly seen in beagles, but also in boxers, GSHP and Bernese mountain dogs. There is significant pain but it is mostly responsive to treatment – often for many months' drugs will relieve all signs. Unfortunately, most dogs eventually succumb to the disease. Referral to a specialist is sometimes advised, with some patients needing a catscan or MRI – but this is more for unusual cases.

There are many causes of tremours, but most can be managed so if you notice a problem please go to your vet for best care.

Reports

9.1 Rescue

Members we currently have three surrendered Cavaliers. We were asked by the RSPCA Yagoona to take in two cavaliers as they had a few issues from the establishment they were siezed from in the Southern Highlands. There were approximately 120 dogs taken into care. We also have a black and tan female approx. 4.5 years. Hopefully I will have them rehomed by the weekend. All have now settled in very well and the two Blenheims from the RSPCA are adjusting to normal family life fairly well

9.2 Show Business

The President reports the Ch Easter Show Schedule is ready for the Journal.

S Oliver's contract has been sent for the for confrimation for the 2016 Open Show.

9.3 Health

The Heart & Eye Clinics' date is the 30th January. Prices to remain the same at $60. for eyes and $40.for hearts.$5. Deposit as usual.

K Camilleri also said that Dogs NSW confirmed the use of the Sec. Hut & G Douglas rooms and will charge us ½ price for the use of the G Douglas Rooms due to the usage for Health Clinics

9.4 Events

We will discuss the CH Easter Show at the next meeting

9.5 Year Book

John Christie is the Editor & Proof Reader for the 2016 Year Book

Karen Paul to arrange the Cover and Show Details.

A list of people who are able to help advertisers set up their page will be provided for those that require it.

We will continue to produce the Year Book to the same format

as previous years.

The release of the Year Book will be after the CH Easter Show.

Interstate orders will be mailed to them. An emai will go out to all of last years advertisers.
